The amendment appropriating $2,759,000 o redeem the District bonds falling due raty; 1801, to be refunded with 3 per cent. interest, was agreed to.

HOUSE.

In the House to-day Senate bill was passed authorizing the Kansas and Arkansas Railroad Company to extend its lines in the Indian Territory.

The House then went into Committee of the Whole on the Legislative Appropriation bill.

Mr. Grosvenor had read the accounts of the meeting at Cooper Union last night, and ex-President Cleveland's letter to E. Ellery Anderson.

Mr. Grosvenor said that he heartily indorsed the letter, and thus placed this important and statemanilke document in the permanent records of the country to the end that in the coming campaign it should be available under the frank of members of the next Congress to be used in disseminating information throughout the country. Mr. Kerr also commented on the Cleve-

A star has fallen from out our firmament. James Phelan is dead. The solenn word comes from the Bahama Isles. Thither had he gone in the hope that the salt and temperate air of the tropic ocean would give him licelith. The journey, the isolation, were in vain. His insuimate body returns. The spirit is uncaged. He whom we loved and honored has passed away. We have only to pay much tribute as affection may prompt. We shall remember him. A great manne, in his youth, carved his name high upon a cliff, that less eager and brave men thought inaccessible.

upon a cliff, that less eager and brave men thought inaccessible.

The years of Phelan's life were few, but he wrought wondrously. His name is written where it will endure. He has left as a heritage to his children a record of extraordinary achievement. Because he was our neighbor, we should not be insensible of the greatness of the man. With the single exception of Alexander Hamilton, no man has ever appeared in the political life of America who, at 30, had accomplished so much or gave such promise of a surpassing career. In youth a most assiduous student, he completed his education at the German universities other men have taken the same course, only to become impracticables in the every-day affairs of the world.

gave a beautiful ball last eyening. The guests came in fancy costume.

The house was triumed with flowers-searlet and green in the wide hali, gold-colored daffodils and orchids in the first parlor. La France and mermet roses in the second and snowy white anunciation lilies and roses in the third-parlor.

Supper was served at small tables in the dining room and conservatory.

The cotillan was danced at 1 o'clock, Mr. Antenio de Barrios, who was very handsome in the blue and white costume of a Humgarian luzzar, leading with Mme, de Barrios' sister, Miss Amelia Aparicio, who made a lovely gypsy girl, in a short skirt of old rose satin, veiled in jeweled gauze, with a necklace of pearls and rubies.

Mine, de Barrios as Cleopatra wore a demi-trained gown of pink satin covered with jeweled gauze, the low-cut corsage and short sleeves edged with jewels as were the satin slippers. She wore an Egyptian headdress of gold, rubies and apphires.

A Crying Need, as It Were.

From the Philadelphia laquirer.

When primitive man—he of the bone caverus and paleolithic implements—wished to summon his retainers, he stoost up and howled for them. His descendants have sought out many inventions; they have devised the telegraph, the telephone, the special delivery, the district messenger, and a great variety of contrivances for making signals, and yet, when Dives gives a ball and finds it necessary to summon the carriage of his guests, in the small hours of the marning, he has no better means of doing so than were possessed by his historic ancestor.

He sends a severate to stand on the side.

guests, in the small hours of the morning, he has no better means of doing so than were possessed by his historic ancestor.

He sends a servant to stand on the sidewalk and howl for an hour or two, until the carriages, which are scattered about the streets for two or three squares in every direction, have been called up and loaded, during which process his neighbors, who have not been invited to the ball, and who are kept awake by the racket, writhe in agony, and call down maledictions upon the head of Dives, his guests, his retainers, and all their descendants, to the fortieth generation.

In this way Pives advertises himself to his guests as a man of wealth, who can afford to entertain liberally, and to his neighbors and the public generally as a man of influence, who can break the peace with impunity, and need not fear the arrest of his servants for making a disturbance one-tenth of which would land a casual reveller in a dungeon cell before he had time to begin a second installment. It is very pleasant for Dives, but how about his neighbors? In this land of the free, where every man is theoretically as good as another, and in his own estimation a good deal better, have they no rights which even Dives and his howling henchmen are bound to respect! Must their rest be broken and their sieep destroyed that his servants legs may be spared the fatigue of running after carriages? We learned some while ago that, as to the subordinate temples of Bacchus, "rum and music won't mix." Does the same principle apply to wine and midnight ululations?

If not, why not? Why should one man who has been making merry with his friends be arrested for singing "We Won't Go Home Till Morning," and another, be

If not, why not? Why should one man who has been making merry with his friends be arrested for singing "We Won't Go Home Till Morning," and another, be permitted to stand for hours in the public street shouting "Number 42—Number 74—Number 86," in a voice that scarces the sparrows from their perches three blocks away? The conceded fact that the former is enjoying himself, while the latter is not, has nothing to do with the question. Simple enjoyment is no crime per se, though some cross-grained folks would like to make it so, nor is a man justified in making a nuisance of himself by the fact that he is working or even doing penance. It is hard work for a burglar to break into a safe, but his labor is not counted to him in mitigation of his sentence.

Boston Recitation.

From the Uhleage Inter-Octan,

"Miss Emersonia Osgoodson will now for the company with a recitation," announced the teacher to the friends that had assembled in the school-room to enjoy the regular afternoon exercises.

Little Miss Emersonia stood forth and recited as follows:
"Coruscate, coruscate, diminutive stellar orb!

"Cornscate, coruscate, diminutive stellar orb!
How inexplicable to me seems the stupendous problem of thy existence!
Elevated to such an immeasurable distance in the illimitable depths of space apparently in a perpendicular direction from the terraqueous planet we occupy!
Resembling in thy dazzling and unapproachable effulgence a crystallized carbon gem of surpassing brilliancy and impenetrability glittering in the ethereal vault whose boundless immensity we endeavor to bring within the compass of the human intellectual grasp by the use of the concrete term firmament?"
When the dear little Boston girl had finished reciting these touching lines in her rapt, soulful, Bostonian way and sat down, there wasn't a dry spectacle in the school-room.

which occurred at his home at Ashland last evening, will make the whole Commonwealth mourn. His brilliant career, compassed within thirty-five years, was without a stain. His life was one of stirring usefulness; of rigid adherence to principle, and of inflexible devotion to the people whom he lovingly served. He was modest, brave and approachable. The friends of his youth he held to steadfastly, and wherever he went the charm of his manner and graces of his heart and head made new ones. To mention the name of Dick Beirne in a public assemblage anywhere in Virginia was to raise a storin of applause. It was the spontaneous ribute of the people to a loyal spirit, a loyal soul, a true gentleman. which occurred at his home at Ashland

CLEVELAND'S LETTER.

DEMOCRATIC CONGRESSMEN REGARD IT AS A MISTAKE.

In Their Opinion It Precludes All Prob-ability of His Being Renominated-

What the Leaders Have to Say. The letter of Mr. Cleveland, in which he again emphatically announces himself as against the free coinage of silver, was the subject of general talk at the Capitol today, especially among Democratic members of the House. As to the effect that the letter would have upon Mr. Cleveland's chances for again being chosen as the standard-bearer of the Democratic party there was almost unanimity of opinion among the Democrate that the letter would either preclude all probability of his being renominated or greatly endanger his political future.

The Chiric reporter spoke to many Democrate on the subject. Here is what some of them had to say:

Mr. Boatner of Louisiana—Westward, not eastward, does the star of empire take its way.

Mr. Sayres of Texas—If the Democratic party stands by its platform it will result in an irreconcilable difference between it and Mr. Cleveland.

Mr. Edmunds of Virginia—It means policical death for Mr. Cleveland as far as the South and West are concerned.

Mr. Quinn of New York—The letter is a big mistake, it is especially in opposition at this time.

Mr. McClamuney of North Cavolina—Cleveland aint in it. He's dumped.

General Wheeler—It would have been better if Cleveland had written a letter declining the nomination. The Democratic party would not dare to nominate Cleveland in the face of that letter. The trouble with Grover Cleveland, it seems to me, is that he is not in touch with the people. That was his weakness when he was in the White House. Instead 50 taking counsel of members of the House; who came direct from the people. Cleveland would usually consult the little coterie of money kings in Wall street.

Mr. Lawler—I have greater admiration for Cleveland now than I ever had, I disagree with him on silver, but I salmire the man for his frankness and sincerity.

Mr. Eithiun of Ilinois—Cleveland is out of the fight. I would very unwillingly time before the next Democratic Convention.

Mr. Owens of Ohio+-Il knocks Cleveland out of the fight. I would very mawillingly kill any man. I am therefore very glad that Cleveland has committed hari-kari.

Mr. Wiley of New York—The letter will help Cleveland in New York. I think that the sentiment of the country is changing to the position which Mr. Cleveland holds.

Mr. Dickerson—I think that Mr. Cleveland has issued his own death warrant.

Mr. Forman of Illinois—Mr. Cleveland cannot expect a renomination at the hands of the Democracy after writing such a letter.

States.

Mr. Breckinridge of Kentucky—I believe that Mr. Cleveland will be the next President of the United States.

Mr. Kerr of Pennsylvania, chairman of his State committee—The West, Southwest and South cannot support Mr. Cleveland after that letter. The letter will, however, help Mr. Cleveland in Pennsylvania.

however, help Mr. Cleveland in Pennsylvania.

Mr. Peel of Arkansas—The letter will hurt Mr. Cleveland. But he has the confidence of more Democrats than any other man in the country. Many of those who differ with him on the silver question will yet be for him for the Presidency.

Mr. Matchler—I's convention to nominate a Democratic candidate for the Presidency were to be called next fall Grover Cleveland would not be much of a factor, but it may be that by the fall following it will be seen that the men who are advocating free coinage are now wrong.

In that event the ex-President would occupy a strong position.

Mr. Goodnight of Kentucky—The letter flattens Mr. Cleveland out completely. The wonder to me is that that man was not condemned long ago. It was known long ago that he was undemocratic on the subject of silver.

Mr. Heard of Missouri—It renders Mr.

the subject of silver.

Mr. Heard of Missouri—It renders Mr. Cleveland unavailable as a candidate for the Presidency, unless a free colnage measure is passed at this session, thus eliminating the silver question from the next campaign. I did not share Mr. Clevecampaign. I did not share Mr. Cleveland's apprehensions about silver in 1885, and I do not credit his prophesies now.

Mr. Wilson, Republean, of Kentucky, thinks that the letter puts Mr. Cleveland and President Harrison in the same boat. He asked Mr. Dalzell, a Pennsylvania Rejublican member, if he was for Cleveland or Harrison, Mr. Dalzell said he was for Cleveland. He asked Mr. Dickinson, a Democratic member from Kentucky, the same question. Mr. Dickinson replied that he was for Cleveland.

Mr. Flower of New York—It shows that Mr. Cleveland has the courage of his convictions.

tacky, the same question. Mr. Pickinson replied that he was for Gleveland.

Mr. Flower of New York—It shows that Mr. Cleveland has the courage of his convictions.

Mr. Heard of Missouri—In my opinion it puts Mr. Cleveland out of the race for the Democratic nomination; unless this Congress should pass a Free Coinage bill, and the silver coinage question thus cease to be an issue. His known and conspicuous opposition to free coinage in the pass would have been required in order to secure for him the support of the West; such a declaration of change of feeling on the subject would have made him of doubtful availability in the East. For myself I have great respect for Mr. Cleveland as a man, and admire his honest expression of opinion, but I have no more faith in him as a prophet than I had in 1885. The weight of argument was against him then, and our subsequent experience has thoroughly discredited his prophecy.

"What do you think of Mr. Cleveland's letter against the free coinage of silver?" asked The Curric reparter of Colonel L. J. Washington, the well-known Democratic correspondent.

"I have only read hastily Mr. Cieveland's letter," replied Colonel Washington, "but I am not surprised to find him echoung the howl of the bankers, money lenders and creditor class of the East against the demand of the great mass of the American people for free coinage and a full correction of the fraud of 1873 by which is overwhelmingly for free coinage, and the Democratic members of the House who, in 1878, passed a free-coinage and a full correction of the Sanators who have just voted almost unanimously for free coinage, and the Democratic Senators who have just voted almost unanimously for free coinage, and the Democratic members of the House who sustain it. But what can you expect of one so ignorant of public affairs as to make the prophesies of run and disaster Mr. Cleveland made in the winter preceding his inauguration as sure to follow the retention of the statute book of the Bland-Allison act of 1878, and who does not see

"It is not necessay to ask me that; it is a mistake."

"Will it affect Cleveland's nomination?"

"Either Mr. Cleveland or the West will have to take water on the silver question and," he added, after a significant pause, "it won't be the West."

Senator Vest, who, it has been alleged, had a letter from Mr. Cleveland, in which that gentleman recanted his anti-silver views, when asked by Tan Carrie for his views of Mr. Cleveland's published letter, replied "I have nothing to say."

Senator Push said if the silver question was before the country in 1802, Grover Cleveland would not be thought of in connection with the Democratic nomination. it is not necessar to ask me that; it is

As Others See Us.

Correspondence of the St. Issuis Democrat.

The woman who isn't married at all always has something to be thankful for—that is, that she didn't marry a politician. I would be Jisgered—with a very large J—if I would sell my soul to the mob because my inusband happened to be Senator. The Senators' and Representatives' wives are the property of the public on certain afternoons, and the American public is not slow to take advantage of its opportunities. Women of all sorts and conditions—women who are rude, ill-dressed, ill-mannered and not pleasant to look upon in any way—calmiy go to houses where they are not known at all, stare at the hosters and her assistants, partake of her hospitality and then go away and find fault with it.

Oh, how I adored my sex when I heard some women down there giving vent to their feelings! A youngish woman in a red frock trimmed with gold braid and a red hat with a gold pompon upon it was at a charming reception given by Madame Romero, and I watched her while she consumed four plates of lee-cream, three glasses of gameh, a cup of coffee, one of checolate, some cake and a few sweets, and then heard her naumur to her companion: "I like to go to a house where they have salads." I don't know what this woman will have in the future, but I hope she will get a salad with so much tobascoon it that a foretaste will be given her here.

Suppose I am a Senator from—well, from Washington; say I have got a charming wife, who is pleasant and her popular. Now, if she were in her own home and receiving my constituents because it was politic to do so, I could understand a raid being made upon her for a few days; but these people here are not my constituents, and, unless they are invited, they have no right to hivade my house. The result of the beautiful system that obtains is that the average woman in Washington in political circles is tired out, wearied to death by people she doesn't know, and she becomes a bundle of nerves while she gains nothing from it all. I consider the who Should Women Propose.

The English are now discussing in profound seriousness the question: "I woman to woo?"—free translation found seriousness the question: "Is woman to woo?"—free translation: Should a woman ask the hand of a man in marriage? To a journal conducted by women for women belongs the honer of having first proposed this mexpected question, and now the press of both sexes, as we must say henceforth, is discussing the problem. There is only one preoccupation, one subject of controversy—"Is woman to woo?" To sum the matter up, the fatality of the age has insisted upon placing this question at the head of the order of the day.

Since the English women have become journalists, traveling guides, doctors in letters and science and claim the privilege of voting and riding horses astride, a single step remains between them and the right of initiative in the matter of conjugal union. The obligation to wait countiess years for a husband must necessarily appear to them as one of those intolerable conditions of inferiority which must be stricken from the social code. Henceforth let men do the waiting. Such is the conclusion of thie majority of ladlesconsulted by "Woman" and its contemporaries.

Only a few of the modest are protesting. They cannot consent to take the offensive in that war in which they have always played the part of beseiged garrisons, other little queens by grace and beauty ask themselves what will become of their royalty if, from solicited idols, they come down to the position of solicitors (soliciteuses), shaking under masculine noses the encensor whose perfume up to the present day they breathed in dignity.

But the majority, the great majority, are for the introversion of the roles, for revolution. They only await the signal to charge upon the bachelors, and they answer all objections with the remark that many men are timid and need the encouragement of outstretched hands;
and that, notwithstanding all the prejudices, and all the routine of centuries, the spectacle of the virgin who dares where the man dares not is delightful. Recollect the discreet advances of the suave Beedemona to the bear, Othello, or read, rather, the "Abba Constantin."

It is no longer the proper thing to speak of an American heiress as a "peerless beauty." Such a description is considered as a reflection either upon her fortune or upon the taste of the peer, both of which are social sins of the first magnitude.—
